EXTRAS:

So far as my knowledge of BYRON's poems extends, the Lament of Tasso is the only one against which no objections can reasonably be made – blasphemy, scepticism, and immorality, nauseousness, bad taste, and negligence, are alike strangers to this highly wrought classic composition, which is not written with exquisite pathos merely, but with a dignity of sentiment, intellectual and moral, such as must necessarily render it attractive, to all thinking readers, for ages yet to come. – B.S.Nayler, introduction to J. van Leep's translation of The Lament of Tasso, Amsterdam 1833
